A Curious Plant.

"A curious plant," said an eminent botanist to the writer a day or two ago, "is the wild tamarind or juba plant of the riverside and waste places of tropical America, and very strange are its effects upon the nonruminant animals that feed upon its young shoots, leaves, pods and seeds. It causes horses to lose the hair from their manes and tails, has a similar effect upon mules and donkeys and reduces pigs to complete nakedness. Horses are said to recover when fed exclusively on corn and grass, but the new hair is of different color and texture from the old, so that the animal is never quite the same as it was.

"One animal of which I personally knew, after feeding on the plant, lost its hoofs and had to be kept in slings until they grew and hardened again. Ruminant animals are not thus affected, and the growth of the plant is actually encouraged in the Bahamas as a fodder plant for cattle, sheep and goats. The difference is probably due to changes effected upon it in the chewing of the cud."-Washington

Ingersoll on Clover.

The late Colonel Ingersoll once sent the following letter of regret in answer to an invitation to dinner by the Clover club:

I regret that it is impossible for me to be in I regret that it is impossible for me to be in "clover" with you tomorrow, first anniversary dinner, 1883. A wonderful thing is "clover." It means honey and cream—that is to say, industry and contentment, that is to say, the happy bees in perfumed fields—and at the cottage gate "Old Boss," the bountiful, serenely chewing satisfaction's cud in that blessed twillight pause that, like a benediction, falls between all toil and sleep. This clover makes me dream of happy hours, of childhood's rosy cheeks, of dimplet a behas of wholesome, loving wives, of honest men. babes, of wholesome, loving wives, of honest n babes, of wholesome, loving wives, of honest men, of springs and brooks and viclets, and all there is of stainless joy in peaceful human life.

A wonderful word is clover! Drop the "c" and you have the happiest of mankind. Take away the "c" and "r" and you have left the only thing that makes a heaven of this dull and barren earth.
Out off the "r" alone, and there remains a very deceitful bud that sweetens the breath and keeps to receive homes whose masters frequent

There is a very jealous elephant in the Jardin des Plantes, Paris. The place where he is housed adjoins that in which the camels are located, and a young camel recently introduced has had great attention lavished on him, to the detriment of the elephant, which had hitherto monopolized public favor in that quarter. The elephant grew more jealous day after day. Failing to more jealous day after day.
